

Roger Lombard - BTech.(hons)

Roger has 25 years in manufacturing industry after graduation, mostly in senior/general management, with ten years at director level, before becoming a freelance training consultant fourteen years ago. His areas of particular interest are helping organisations with continuous improvement and the management of change and in developing and delivering training in the “soft” management and interpersonal skills. These include: leadership; personal effectiveness and self management; effective communication; negotiating for win/win; team building and coaching and motivation. He works with a wide variety of clients representing organizations both large and small, UK based and international, in both manufacturing and service sectors. His style is essentially pragmatic but he believes in training that is fun being more effective than dry rhetoric

With 25 years in manufacturing industry including ten years at director level, Roger changed career to become a freelance training consultant fourteen years ago. His areas of particular interest are helping organisations with continuous improvement and the management of change and training and coaching in “soft” management and interpersonal skills. His range of clients represents organizations both large and small, UK based and international, in both manufacturing and service sectors.

